

Trainee/Journey Reclassification

Introduction to Trainee/Journey Reclassification

Within the State of Iowa's classification system, there are a number of trainee-level job classes which are intended for employees who learn to perform their assigned work through the course of a defined minimum trainee period, before eventually becoming proficient enough to progress to the suitable journey-level job classification.

Following the required minimum time spent at the trainee level, an employee may be moved to the journey-level job class through the position reclassification process. Trainee/journey reclassifications are not automatic, and are based on proficiency and work performance.

Supervisors are responsible for reviewing the progress of the employee in the trainee class. If the employee's performance is not at the journey level within the minimum time required, the trainee period may be extended. However, under no circumstance can the period of time be shorter than the minimum time requirements on the journey-level job class description. These minimum time requirements vary by job class and are summarized below.

Processing Trainee/Journey Reclassifications

Once the minimum trainee period has been met and the employee is performing at the journey level, the agency must prepare and submit an updated Position Description Questionnaire (PDQ) to facilitate the employee's reclassification from the trainee to the suitable journey-level job class. The effective date of the reclassification may be no earlier than the beginning of the first full pay period following the minimum trainee period.

Filling Vacancies in Trainee/Journey Classifications

Supervisors have the discretion to fill vacancies at either the trainee or journey level; however, the position must first be correctly classified at the chosen level. An updated Position Description Questionnaire (PDQ) must be prepared and submitted to facilitate the position reclassification from the trainee to the journey level, or vice-versa.

Trainee/Journey Progression within a Single Classification

The job classes listed below are single classifications that are considered comparable to the two-class trainee/journey concept. These classes have elongated pay grade ranges to reflect the full trainee-to-journey progression. There are no minimum time periods for progression through these pay grades. Based on individual qualifications in excess of the minimum qualifications for the job class, management has the discretion to set the pay for new hires at any amount within the elongated pay grade range, subject to DAS-HRE approval. Minimum qualification requirements for these classes are based on trainee-level work.

Trainee/journey progression within a single classification are found within the following classes:
